Borough of Bradley Beach members ratify new contract

n June 9, members at the Borough of Bradley Beach unanimously voted to ratify a new contract.

Local 152 proudly represents approximately 30 members at the Borough of Bradley Beach, a shore town in Monmouth County, N.J. Members work in a variety of positions, including sanitation drivers, machine operators, police dispatchers, clerical and more.

The three-year contract introduces many new benefits. All members will receive substantial improvements to the wage step progressions and all eligible employees who are at the top rate of their step progression will receive annual raises each year for the life of the contract.

The contract preserves members' affordable health insurance, making it easier for both junior and future members to obtain and access inexpensive health care. The contract also establishes clear language for the New Jersey Earned Sick Leave Act.

The Negotiating Committee included Director of Collective Bargaining Dan Ross, Director of Organizing and Union Representative Chad Brooks, Director of Communications and Union Representative Mike Thompson, Shop Stewards Nicole Browning, John Reid and Patty Martuscelli, and member Dana Mikaitis.

ocal 152 members at Lawrence Street Seafood in Philadelphia, PA voted unanimously to ratify a new contract in July.

The new five-year agreement provides continual monthly pension contributions as well as a monthly increase in each member's 401K savings plan. In addition, members will receive yearly wage increases, including an upfront raise of $1 per hour in 2020. Bereavement leave was increased, and affordable health insurance was maintained for the life of the agreement.

The Negotiating Committee included Director of Collective Bargaining Dan Ross, Union Representative

Matte Kane and Shop Steward Tommy Ziegler.

Lawrence Street Seafood is a seafood wholesaler and distributor offering fresh and frozen seafood products to markets in the region.

Supply chains under strain

the number of out-of-stocks many retailers are again experiencing. After the panic buying and hoard mentality that prevailed in March and April that adversely affected all supply chains, I noticed a significant improvement from mid-May until late June. But beginning in July, I've witnessed declining service levels in some previous "hot spots" that had been improving in such categories as soup, flour and canned vegetables (not including paper and frozens, which have improved but have never been anywhere close to normal —

Clearly, things are not back to normal, and with COVID-19 spikes in other markets, primarily in the South and Southwest and on the West Coast, supply chains are going to falter in spots. Of course, from the inside-baseball industry view, this is just going to heighten the tension between retailers and suppliers.

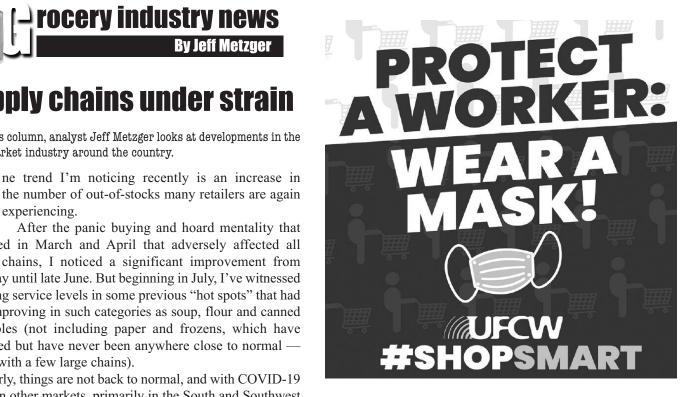

Some retailers are already poised to impose pandemic-related costs on their vendors, while some other smaller merchants, regional chains and wholesalers are prepared to penalize their suppliers for what they believe is improper allocation of product.

New online shopping competition except with a few large chains).

According to a story in Recode Magazine, Walmart will soon launch its own shopping subscription service designed to compete directly against Amazon Prime. Membership in the new service will cost $98 annually (vs. Prime's $119 fee) and will offer such services as same-day grocery delivery, early access to promotions and gas station discounts.

2020 graduates: Challenges and opportunities

The future is bright for a new generation of leaders

he children of many Local 152 members, and some members themselves, graduated from high school this year.

These young men and women are all too familiar with the extraordinary circumstances of their transition from high school to college. The coronavirus robbed them and their classmates of so many of the treasured rituals of this time in their lives.

Many seniors of 2020 feel disappointed, frustrated, unsure and maybe even angry, and we can only empathize with them.

But instead of dwelling on what has been missed, let's focus on what has been gained.

Our highest aspirations

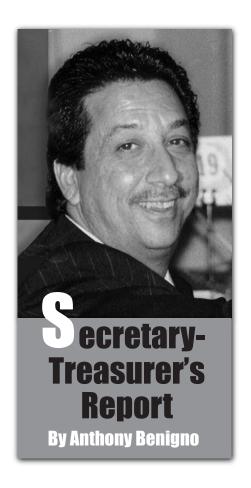

To the class of 2020: You and your peers have gained the admiration, respect and love of our nation. We all share in a collective pride for your scholastic achievements, and we have the confidence in your ability to meet the challenges of the future.

And now, as America confronts yet another challenge — a reckoning for centuries of racial injustice — we have the same faith in your generation's ability to move us ever closer toward fulfilling this nation's highest aspirations.

Your future remains bright in spite of all that is happening. You are graduating at a time where the world has come together to fight a common enemy: a virus.

The global commitment to science and medicine and building a worldwide infrastructure to deal with future pandemics and protect our people is a priority for all of us, but we are depending on YOU to complete the job.

When so many were sheltered in place, you or your parents stepped in to protect our fellow Americans — as members of our union and as employees in an essential industry.

The collective power of unions at this time in history has demonstrated that when workers come together, they can protect each other.

Thank you for all you have done, and thank you for all you will do.

New Telemedicine benefit ocal 152 is introducing a brand new

Telemedicine Program for all members who use our medical benefits.

The Telemedicine and Teletherapy programs are now live and available to members who have medical coverage and their eligible dependents through the UFCW Local 152 Health and Welfare Fund, UFCW Tri-State Health and Welfare Fund and the UFCW Health and Welfare

As a reminder, there is no copay when these services are used.

Telemedicine: Provides on-demand, 24/7 access to voice or video calls with state-licensed health care providers. Private and discreet, the service is accessible any time you or your eligible dependents need medical treatment or advice. In addition to diagnosis and treatment for common illnesses and injuries, you can have them review lab tests, provide a second opinion and, where permitted by law, issue prescriptions.

Teletherapy: The behavioral health Teletherapy service makes it super easy to receive therapy from the privacy and comfort of your own home. All therapists are licensed professionals who can provide care for many of the most common health concerns.

It's time for CEOs to restore hazard pay

Throughout Local 152's jurisdiction, frontline workers are continuing to show up for our communities every single day despite the very real dangers they face.

With more than 5.5 million COVID-19 cases nationwide (at the time of this writing) and more people getting sick every day, grocery workers in our neighborhood supermarkets are among those with the most risk to contract the virus, sometimes interacting with thousands of customers a day.

Without the courage of these essential workers who continue to put themselves in harm's way, families in our communities would not have the food they need during this crisis.

Given the growing risks as cases continue to spread, it is time for the CEOs of every grocery chain in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware to step up and guarantee hazard pay for all of these frontline workers.

Local 152 represents thousands of workers in grocery stores and many other essential businesses across four states. The members of our union know first-hand that the danger never went away. Yet many of the CEOs of our country's largest grocery chains ended hazard pay for these workers as if the pandemic was over and they are no longer at risk.

Confronting reality

In reality, workers continue to get sick and die from COVID-19. Nationwide, there have already been at least 100 grocery worker deaths and thousands more infected. Our members in grocery stores, nursing homes, processing plants and other essential businesses continue to live with the daily fear of not only becoming sick, but also putting their families in danger by bringing this deadly virus home.

It is stunning to see the CEOs of grocery chains and other employers raking in billions in profits during the pandemic and still cutting hazard pay for these brave frontline workers. These companies are treating grocery workers as expendable at a time when the danger of the virus is just as real as on Day One of the pandemic, and we continue to count on these essential workers to be able to put food on the table for our families.

Our families deserve better.

As COVID-19 cases continue to spread across the communities we serve and our members continue their essential service to our communities, it is time for CEOs to tell the truth about the real risks that exist in grocery stores and provide the strong hazard pay these workers have earned for the danger they face every day.

The only way we will get through this is together, and that starts with companies doing the right thing by putting workers and families first.
